CASE # 11-8318

On 6/1/11, I, Elana Laham, noticed an unknown red rash all over both of my breasts. Three weeks later the rash was spreading. I noticed that the rash markings looked like mold on bread with the only difference being that they were red in color not white in color. So it occurred to me that perhaps I had Candidas.

According to the Webster's New World College English Dictionary fourth edition page 213, Candidas is "a common fungal infection caused by yeast that thrives on any moist cutaneous (skin) area of the body...that can develop into serious internal and chronic conditions."

On 6/29/11, I went to the Valley Medical Center Emergency Room. The ER Physician there named J. DePaepe told me that she did not know what the rashes were on my breasts. I told her I thought they might be Candidas. She told me that Candidas only grows on moist areas of the skin. I told her I am in Menopause and am undergoing hot flashes and cold sweats and so my breasts are hot and moist a lot of the time. After that she said, "It could be Candidas". I asked her what she would recommend for treatment to get rid of it. She said Monistat - Miconazole Cream. She told me I can buy it over the counter. After that she recommended that I go see a dermatologist in order to get a proper diagnosis of the rashes on both of my breasts.

None of the dermatologists on my health insurance plan were available until August. I made an appointment with one of them. Meanwhile, I applied the Miconazole Cream twice a day for the two weeks per its instructions. To no avail! It stopped my rashes from spreading but they did not go away.

Then I remembered that Miconazole got rid of the ringworm that I had some years ago. Ringworm is a type of yeast fungus. So it occurred to me that perhaps I needed to get a stronger medication. My husband and I researched the internet and down-loaded from a website called <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Candidiasis>. This website contains literature pertaining to common yeast infections and how to get rid of them. I found a medication I thought would make the Candidas I thought I had go away. It is called Nystatin. It described itself as "...an anti fungal drug to which many molds and yeast infections are sensitive, including Candida" This is on Page 2 of 5 of a website for Nystatin called <http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Nystatin>.

CASE # 11-8318

On 7/14/11, I went to the Highline Medical Center Emergency Room hoping their ER Physician might know for sure what I had. ER Physician Alan Chock told me he did not know what the rashes on both of my breasts were. He too reiterated that I had to go see a dermatologist to get a proper diagnosis of them. I told him I already had an appointment with one but that the earliest I could schedule in for a visit was in August. After that, I told him that I thought I might have Candidas. I showed him the literature I down loaded off the internet that talks about Nystatin and asked him if he would prescribe Nystatin for me. He did. I went to the pharmacy got my prescription filled for Nystatin Cream and began applying it twice daily immediately per its instructions. It said not to take any longer than two weeks. By 7/28/11, I noticed that the red round rash markings on both of my breasts were flattening out and fading away but still there.

So on 8/11/11, three months and running with an unknown rash all over both of my breasts, I went to see dermatologist Nicole Kageyama whom I had my appointment with. I told her I thought I had Candidas. I told her I was taking Nystatin for it. I told her the Candidas appeared to be making the rashes go away.

Her reply was, "You don't have Candidas. You have an allergic reaction to heat." She did not tell me what this condition was called that she claimed that I had. I had to ask her. She said it was "Miliaria". When I requested if she had some literature on it, she told me to "Go look it up on line".

According to the Webster's New World College English Dictionary fourth edition page 913 Miliaria is "an acute skin disease resulting from inflammation of the sweat glands as from exposure to heat and characterized by small white or red eruptions". She then recommended that I take Cortisone to make it go away. I asked her, "Is Cortisone a steroid?" I assumed that it was because I know that medications that end in "-one" generally tend to have steroids in them. She said "Yes". I told her "I am allergic to steroids". Then I showed her the steroid spill on both of my breasts. It looks like a cluster of dark pink web like markings. I told her it has been there for six years now. Her reply to that, which she uttered repeatedly was, "I don't see anything". So I told my husband, "Help her find it." I then remarked, "The one on my right breast looks like

1) a poodle dog". She then said, "Those are capillaries. It's normal." I told her, "It is not normal. I did not have these discolorations prior to the time I took ringworm medication with steroids in it." I also said, "The capillaries are there to clean up the steroid spill".

2) She then said, "You are NOT allergic to steroids; otherwise there would be a red rash there." I told her, "I did have a red rash there after taking Betamethasone for a month to get rid of the ringworm I had years ago. Steroids are known to be dangerous and useless. They couple them with other medications which work fine without them. They have damaged my breasts. I can't and won't take steroids."

Then I asked her if she had any other medication that does not have steroids in it to get rid of the now three month old rashes on both of my breasts. She said "no". After that she had the audacity to tell me that I can take steroids or nothing. To that I said, "Then you won't help me". I got dressed and left.

3) Still not knowing for sure what the rashes on my breasts were, I continued to take the Nystatin, which I started using on 7/14/11 until 8/19/11. By that time the red rashes on both of my breasts were almost completely gone! This is when I realized that Nicole Kageyama had lied to me that I had Miliaria.

4) I was outraged that, even though I have full medical coverage, I had to wait three months to see a dermatologist about a growing unknown red rash on both of my breasts, who was supposed to resolve my condition since she specializes in disorders of the skin but instead:

1) She lied to me that I had Miliaria. Obviously I did not have Miliaria since the Nystatin which is an anti fungal cream made the red rashes on both of my breasts go away and since I have been in Menopausal state for over a year now and never had such rashes on my skin before. I do not believe that she does NOT know that I had Candidas since she is a skin doctor and she works in western Washington State where the growth of yeast fungus is a common occurrence.

2) She took a HIPPOCRATIC OATH to help not harm patients, and yet she has the audacity to lie to me that I am NOT allergic to Steroids and attempted to push their poisonous dope onto me anyway, even though my breasts are living testimony of the damage that they have caused my body. AM I SOME SORT OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS TEST?

3) In spite of the DAMAGE the steroids have done to my breasts she has the audacity to DISCRIMINATE against me because I can't and won't take steroids by refusing to give me any medical services. I THOUGHT I HAD PATIENT RIGHTS!

4) Even though, I HAD TO PLAY DOCTOR AND FIGURE OUT WHAT WAS WRONG WITH ME AND RESOLVE MY OWN MEDICAL CONDITION, MYSELF, I had to pay her for medical services in advance with my $15.00 co-payment. In addition, she is going to charge my health insurance company for my visit to her office even though she deliberately chose to do NOTHING for me. I cancelled my $15.00 co-payment check to her office due to her unethical corrupt business practices; however, there is no grievance procedure by which I can voice my legitimate complaint to in order to rectify her collecting payment for NO services rendered.

5) She offended me with her grossly unprofessional attire. I thought I was in a brothel instead of a respectable doctor's office. Her legs were so exposed I do not recall if she even had anything other than panties underneath her flared open white coat. It was disgusting!

6) Candidas can develop into serious internal and chronic conditions. She made me wait two months before she would see me even though we told her office that I had an unknown growing red rash on both of my breasts. Being that I had Candidas she put me at risk for serious internal health problems by prolonging my opportunity to get any medical attention for it and in the end she refused to give me any medical attention for it.

CASE # 11-8318

We sent her the following fax/e-mail to express our outrage and to make sure that she does not charge my health insurance company for additional visits that we have never had and will never had with her because we told her we will not be doing anymore business with her:

To Nicole Kageyama,

You are one mean, stupid, selfish, lazy, arrogant, lying flunky, Nicole Kageyama. The Candidas that I told you I had is gone thanks to the Nystatin that I told you I had been taking for it. Since you discriminate against patients who can't or won't take steroids, by not rendering them any medical services, we cancelled the $15.00 co-payment that we gave your office. We don't care if you put it on our credit reports since creditors are judge, jury, and executioner, so the credit system is bogus. We don't care if you charge our health insurance company for rendering us no medical services since its just one crook crooking another crook. Do you dress like a slut because you do tricks to make enough money to compensate for the fact that you are a medical malpractice lawsuit waiting to happen? How interesting! Good riddance to you, brand new patients Elana Laham and Michael Laham. Any correspondence we receive from you will Not be read, Not be opened, Not be listened to, and either trashed or returned to sender.
