Why It Is Important To Learn How To Stop Physical Bullying

17.02.2014 | Author: Eliza Mendoza | Posted in Society

Bullying is one behavior that continues to hurt and destroy the bright future of children. This behavior not only affects the bullied but also the bullies. It is important that people mandated to take care and offer parental guidance to children understand their needs. By learning how to stop physical bullying, it can help protect children and young adults from this kind of hurting behavior.

The effects of a bully behavior can last for a long time, and children who have been affected may grow up with those challenges. The children may show the effects many years after the bully happened. There are tormenting experiences, which can affect the future of a child. The earlier the situation is dealt with to help the child to understand this issue, the better it is because it assists the affected child to cope and deal with the effects.

There are incidents where a child fails to go to school because of fear of attacks and constant molestation from the bully. It is not a comfortable experience for the children even those who are not directed involved. Even seeing it happen to a friend hurts. When a child does not concentrate on studies, it means that the future of that student is fading, and something has to be done to get the child out of that experience.

Many cases of bully activities go unreported because the victims fear of further aggressive attacks should the bully know about it. However, this is a big mistake made by the people subjected to such harassment, and they have to learn how to approach bullying in the right manner. No matter how defenseless a child feels, there is always help from the older people.

When they notice some abnormal behaviors such as distress, depression, and anxiousness, they need to talk to the children to establish the problem. At times, the children affected will not even dare to mention anything about bullying, and they may be mistaken or misdiagnosed of suffering or experiencing other conditions and problems. When things get worse, children affected by the behavior may even attempt suicide.

Children who are bullied may also develop other effects such as showing aggression just like the bullies. This may be dangerous because it could lead to confrontation between the bullied and the bully. Others may turn their anger and frustrations inward, and they become self-destructive. This situation may lead to other problems like substance abuse.

In an effort to erode the thoughts and cope with the stress, agony, and frustrations, the bullied children may turn to the abuse of drugs. Drugs abuse already starts growing to another serious problem. Delayed development, lack of confidence, low self-esteem, withdrawal, and isolation, are other signs that could show that a child is being bullied.

Some children may even suffer from nightmares where they see people fighting them because the mind is trying to connect and flashback back on what they have been going through. Teachers, parents, and other adults do not have to let children to face all these problems. There is something they can do to help bullied children, and this is by understanding and applying the right approach on how to stop physical bullying among the children.
